The food pyramid breaks down into five sections to make healthy choices easier, and we've put together a little list to help you on your way. Vitamin A. This vitamin is found in beta-carotene, which is found in leafy greens, tomatoes, carrots, dark yellow or orange sweet potatoes, and papaya. It also helps protect eyes from certain diseases. Vitamin B. Eat plenty of foods high in vitamin B, such as leafy greens, leafy vegetables, mushrooms, beans, and fish. It also helps your body absorb and use iron, and may help your body fight cancer and diabetes. Vitamin C. One of the easiest vitamins to get is this citrus fruit staple, found in berries, bell peppers, broccoli, and kiwis. Vitamin C also helps your body fight the common cold, has been shown to decrease symptoms of the common cold, and helps keep your skin healthy. Vitamin D. This vitamin is essential for proper bone development. You can get it by eating fish, eggs, milk, and cheese. It also helps fight infection, reduce the risk of some cancers, and help keep your blood sugar and immune system strong. Vitamin E. This vitamin is found in nuts, legumes, soybeans, wheat germ, vegetable oils, and some whole grains. It 82157476af
